Read the passage and answer the following questions.

Why does fear make the hair stand on end? Have you ever been scared of anything? Did it make your hair stand on end? When we are frightened, our hair stands on end like the quills on a porcupine! Do you know why? At the root of the hair we find a tiny muscle. Normally, the hair lies slantwise when the muscle is relaxed. But when the muscle starts working, the hair stands upright!

When we are frightened, our nerves control these tiny muscles and they become active. Thus, the hair is raised. When the hair is up right, a creature actually looks more frightening! A cat, when its hair is standing on end, looks bigger and more terrible to an enemy.
