Q2. The hopping kangaroo is a familiar sight in every snapshot related to Australia. The members of the kangaroo family can be as small as a rat or as big as a man. Kangaroos are found mainly in Australia, Tasmania and New Guinea. The man sized kangaroo of Australia are capable of speeding up to 88km/hr for short distances and jump over 9 metres or more at a time. Weighing around 70kg, they have an average life span of around six to eight years. When bothered by predators, kangaroos often stand submerged to the chest in water , by doing so they try to drown their enemy. Normally these shy animals alert other kangaroos of the danger by beating on the ground with their hind feet. The tail is important for kangaroos. It holds them in balance and supports them when they sit or fight with other kangaroos. The kangaroo uses its short legs as arms. With it scratches itself, cleans its fur and holds branches when it eats leaves. Female kangaroos carry their newborns in a pouch on their bellies. The babies are born small and spend 225 days in the pouch where they eat , sleep and grow. Once they reach their full development, they leave the pouch. A young kangaroo is called a joey.
